Celebrating Labor Day 2020

Labor Day is a great opportunity to enjoy the last breath of summer before the fall season. While social distancing ordinances remain in place, there are still a great number of alternative ways to take it easy and celebrate the national holiday.

Soak Up the Sun at Fort Tilden Beach

- » Located in The Rockaways, Fort Tilden Beach is one of the city's best destinations for a low-key, sparsely crowded day on the sand. The beach is well-connected by public transportation including the NYC Ferry, bike lanes and by car with access to a large public parking lot at the neighboring Riis Beach.

Visit The Bronx Brewery's Outdoor Taproom & Patio

- » Located near the waterfront edge of Mott Haven, The Bronx Brewery has reopened its taproom and outdoor patio. If you're in the mood to try locally brewed craft beer, make a reservation to visit The Bronx Brewery. Space is limited, so be sure to plan ahead.

Best Apple Orchards for the Kids

- » From now through Autumn, apple orchards in the Tri-State area offer families a chance to pick their own apples. To keep visitors safe and socially distanced, orchards have reopened at reduced capacity, so it's recommended to call before you visit. Click here for a list of the best, family-friendly apple orchards near New York City.

Stock Up on Local Produce for a Labor Day Feast

- » Farmers Markets are one of the best places for New Yorkers to purchase fresh, locally grown produce. Visit Grow NYC for a full list of farmers markets in the five boroughs, and then head over to Delish for the perfect summer vegetable recipe to prepare for a Labor Day feast!
